

Task 7.3 RAID Types

If you decide to purchase a RAID array for your personal home use, which RAID level would you choose? Why?

I would choose RAID1 because It's a relatively inexpensive way to make data redundant. RAID 1 is a fault-tolerant configuration in which the same data is written to two hard disks. If one of the hard disks fails, the system will not stop and data will not be lost.